The WCTU Library is open every Saturday from 3 to 4 o'clock. Membership $1.00 a year.

The L & N will run another $1.75 excursion to Cincinnati Sunday and a big crowd will go down.

The "Blue Front" store room was sold Monday by Master Commissioner Rothwell, J. I. Hamilton becoming the purchaser at $3,410.

Circuit Clerk Hamilton sold his residence, on Hill street, to Ross Bastin, price $2,000. Mr. Hamilton will buy elsewhere in the city.

The local political pot continues to boil. Read our list of candidates' announcements and see who they are who want you to help them. They're all good people, well-qualified for the places sought.

A number of sidewalks in the city are becoming very rough and uneven. This is a great nuisance, and then, too, it will eventually make the girls bow-legged. How about this latter important matter, Mayor Logan?

The ladies of the WCTU will have an exchange next Saturday the 29th in Stormes store room. They will also serve ice cream and cake at 15c a saucer with a slice of cake. Doors open at 2 p. m., and the money is to buy books for the Library.

No Preaching Sunday.

Br. Tindler writes The Record, from Cincinnati, that he will be unable to fill his pulpit at local Christian church next Sunday, as the minister for whom he is holding a meeting has been called away by serious illness of his wife's father.

Floyd's Philosophy.

"Sometimes I think I'd about as soon be a hog as a human," said John Floyd, of color, yesterday, as he paid a dollar poll tax on a hound pup. "Kase a hog is never in hot water but once, and that's after he's dead, whereas de po cullud man is in hot water at least half his natchel lifetime."

We Must Keep Him.

Last Sunday morning, when the heat was almost unbearable, a certain Lancaster minister preached for not more than fifteen or twenty minutes. As the Lancaster people are determined to keep this gentleman, The Record will not give his name, because we know that he will be eagerly sought after by other towns.

Earn Your Own Wages.

Harrodsburg Herald:—If a minister can stand up in a stiff collar and a frock coat and preach for an hour in this boiling August weather, it looks like as if other men might saunter in and listen to him—if provided with cool clothing and a big fan. Oh, he is paid to preach, you say. Well, it may be news to you, but you are paid to listen to him—paid by the moral and civilizing influences which would not exist if churches were wiped off the earth. Turn out next Sunday and earn your wages.

They're Coming Back.

Quite a number of the colored men who went to Cincinnati and Indianapolis and suburbs of those cities are returning to their old homes, having found that they can make and save more right here than in the big cities. While they got bigger salaries, it is true, yet the expense of living was also higher, and they were compelled to put in more hours and at harder labor. Each excursion brings back some of them, and, as cold weather approaches more will join in the homeward march. There were many good negroes who left here, and also some very undesirable ones. If the good will return and the trifling ones remain, Lancaster will be largely the winner.

Fine Times At Estill.

The Eight District Publishers' League will hold its quarterly meeting on Sept 4th, this time at Estill Springs. The League has been so successful in its undertakings that it has attracted attention of newspaper men all over the state. It is working wonders for the good of the public and members. The Estill Springs meeting will be attended by a great many prominent newspaper men from over the state who are not members. A most delightful and interesting program is being arranged for both the business and the social sessions. A feature of the occasion will be the attendance by a very large number of ladies, they having been especially invited.

GEORGE D. POTTS DEAD.

A Well-Known Lancaster Boy Dies in Maryland. Son of Mrs. Eugenia D. Potts.

Mr George D Potts, the only son of Mrs Eugenia Dunlap Potts, died Thursday afternoon at Frederick, Md., after an illness of about three weeks. The interment took place in the Potts' family lot in Frederick. Mr Potts is survived by his wife and one son, George Murdock Potts. He was a nephew of Mrs George Denny and Mr Wood G Dunlap, of Lexington and Rev George W Dunlap, of Las Cruces, N. M. George Dunlap Potts was born in Montgomery, Ala., on November 24, 1864. His father, Dr Richard M Potts was a surgeon in the United States Army before the war, and was a great personal friend of General U S Grant. When war was declared Dr Potts resigned his commission and immediately joined the Confederate army and was given the rank of Major and was in charge of General Polk's division until the surrender at Appomattox. He died in Memphis, Tenn., on July 15, 1866, aged 38 years, and was buried in Frederick, Md., in the family lot. The childhood and early youth of George D Potts were spent at his grandfather Dunlap's home in Lancaster, Ky., but each year he paid a visit of some months to his father's family in Maryland. After finishing the course at the schools in Lancaster his education was completed at Alexandria, Va. He and his mother then moved to Chicago where Mr Potts was in the employ of N W Harris & Co's banking house. After two years' stay they moved to New York.

A few years later Mr Potts was sent to Cincinnati in the employ of the Winifrede Coal Co. While there he met and married Miss Rose Frances Greenan on December 12, 1893. A year later he was made manager of the Burnet House, which position he held for eight years and then leased the Stanton House at Chattanooga where he lived for three years. His health became impaired from the confinement, and he went back to New York. Four years ago he was made Cashier and Auditor of the St Louis branch of the Columbia National Life Insurance Co., of Boston, Mass., which position he held at the time of his death.

He possessed a bright, cheerful, sunny disposition, made friends in every walk in life, climbed no hills, and endeared himself to everyone with whom he came in contact. His ancestors on the Potts side came from England and settled in Hagerstown and Frederick, Md., and they have no connections outside of the State. Richard Potts, the elder, was an aide to Governor Thomas Johnston in 1776, and afterward clerk of the Frederick County Court, a member of the Maryland House of Delegates and the Continental Congress, States Attorney of Washington and Montgomery counties, States Senator U S District Attorney for Maryland, Chief Justice of the Fifth District of Maryland and members of the Court of Appeals. Major Samuel Ringgold, who fell at Beuna Vista, and Commodore Cadwallader Ringgold, of U S Navy, were grand uncles of distinction. The ancestors of Mr Potts on his mother's side trace back to General William Jennings, Gen William Dunlap and Col William Jennings, who fought in the Revolutionary War. Mr Pott's grandfather, George W Dunlap, was a lawyer of distinguished ability, a member of the Legislature from Garrard county, member of the Border State convention that voted for men and money put a stop to the Civil War, and member of Congress from his district.

Mrs Eugenia Dunlap Potts left a sick bed to go to her son as soon as she was notified of his illness. In her feeble condition the shock proved too much for her and she is now in the hospital at Frederick, but last reports from her bedside were encouraging and her many friends hope to see her home again in a short time. All feel the deepest sympathy for her in this loss of her only child; her devotion, love and thought for whom was the supreme element in her life.

Fish All Gone.

A local Nimrod tells The Central Record that there simply are no fish in Dix river, the geyners and dynamiters having completely ruined the stream. There is no finer fish stream anywhere, and the fact that a lot of law-breakers have been allowed to commit this crime is a shame and disgrace to a community supposed to have the least respect for law and order.

Try It, and See.

There is no sport that can engage the attention of men that has so few of the objectionable elements as fishing. It is a quiet and unobtrusive pastime and is not so violent in nature as hunting. Besides there is infinitely less cruelty in it than any other sports that includes the taking of life. It is the kind of sport that its disciples can have time to ruminate on the good and bad things of the world and also to take in all the salient beauties of the forest, lake and stream between bites. The hunter must tramp about and be ever on the alert in order to sight the game. Tramping all day and an empty game bag is not conducive to the best temper in the world. But in fishing suppose there are but few catches there yet remains the satisfaction that one is not exhausted with the sport. The fisherman becomes a philosopher and a person of kindly disposition simply from the sport he follows. Patience is cultivated and evil thoughts do not find lodgement in the heart of the fisherman.

And then the reminiscences of the fisherman. They run back to the days of pinhooks and any sort of pole and line, back along the creek bank under the willows to the spot where the first fish was landed. True it may have been the smallest sunfish in the creek or a silverside sparkling in the sunshine of an ideal summer day or perhaps only a lowly chub. But it was a fish and the first that you ever caught and all fish since then, whether the gamey bass or a royal trout, never quite measure up to the fish of the bare-foot boy down by the creek in that far off day when you first went fishing.

A man, or woman for that matter, who delighted to cast a bait or whip a stream, who can take chances for a bite and come home with either a full or empty basket, will have had a day of sport that has cleaned the cobwebs from a tired brain and pushed the wrinkles from weary eyes. Just go fishing once, if you have never been, and see what satisfaction comes from getting away from the crowd. The fact that one must get into quiet nooks and away from the noise to fish is something gained already.

Fish Killed.

At the recent big fire near Midway at which forty-seven thousand barrels of whiskey were burned, a tributary of South Elkhorn creek was filled with the burning whiskey, which set the creek on fire for miles. In consequence of the burned whiskey, the fish in South Elkhorn have been killed by thousands and fishermen fear that fishing there, which is one of the best streams in the State, has been ruined.
